

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

"From the total training during childhood there should result in the child a taste for interesting and improving reading which should direct and inspire its subsequent intellectual life. . . . The uplifting of the democratic masses depends on this implanting at school of the taste for good reading."—CHARLES W. ELIOT.

The following arrangement of books for elementary school libraries is an attempt to help the principal and teacher in careful and intelligent selection of children's reading for each grade. It is hoped that the annotations will go far toward fitting the right book to the right child, and bring into use or favor many volumes which seldom leave the shelves.

The grading is necessarily tentative, but has been based on experience and should prove trustworthy for the average child, though it will hardly be suited to every section of the city. This matter must be regulated by the principal and teacher who are on the ground and understand the conditions.

GENERAL RULES AND SUGGESTIONS FOR CLASS LIBRARIES.

The library appropriation made each year is based upon the amount required to install and maintain in each classroom a small library graded to the intellectual capacity of the pupils.

In this connection sets of books for supplementary reading are not to be considered as class libraries.

Beginning at the higher grades, install libraries as far down toward the kindergarten as the books will go, aiming at having at least a book per pupil in each room, or an average of fifty volumes, when the equipment shall be complete.

Select different books for the classes of each year as far as possible, so that when pupils are promoted, a fresh library will be awaiting them in the new grade.

This small classroom collection should not only offer books of information for reference or correlation, but rather its object should be to place before the children as soon as they learn to read, attractive books of sufficient interest to develop habits of reading and cultivate a love for the best literature. The library ought to strengthen the cultural side rather than the informational.

REFERENCE USE.

Small reference collections are recommended for grammar grades, especially for departmental classes, workshops, cooking rooms, etc. A knowledge of how to use reference books and familiarity with certain standard ones will be one of the most valuable things acquired in school. For this purpose some of the books in the teachers' reference library may well be placed in the classroom from time to time, but a good dictionary, a volume or two of the "Young Folk's Cyclopedia," a book of synonyms, an almanac, a small biographical dictionary, gazeteer, atlas, etc., should be permanent acquisitions.

CIRCULATION AND HOME READING.

Let most of the books, however, be selected for circulation and home reading. They may be drawn and taken home by the pupils at such times as the principal or teacher shall appoint; opportunity being given at least once each week, although a free use of open shelves at all times is the better plan.

The teacher is librarian for the classroom. Upon her interest and her knowledge of the books necessarily depends the success of the library. It is thoroughly established that she must combine, to a certain extent, the duties of librarian and instructor, and become a guide to good reading if her instruction is to be far-reaching in its results. The appointment of monitors or assistant librarians to relieve the teacher of clerical work and interest pupils in library methods is also recommended.

A record of the circulation should be kept in blank books or on record cards provided for the purpose, as a report on use will be called for at the end of each term. Books drawn should be retained not longer than two weeks, those in great demand not longer than one week, or such time as the teacher shall decide.

The class library will, perhaps, commend itself more particularly to the teacher of English than any other. Here opportunities will be presented for advice on reading, book talks, discussions and especially written reviews. A record of the term's reading kept in a blank book for the purpose is an exercise that is valuable, not only in composition, but as an indication of what the child gets from the book he reads.

For history classes a liberal infusion of historical stories will arouse interest in many prosaic events. Nearly every period of American and English history has been covered in story form for young readers.

Du Chaillu, Nansen, Brassey, Verne, Bullen and many other travellers will aid in making geography a pleasure. But, while the library may be made in this way to correlate with many subjects, it should be done with moderation, and not to the exclusion of everything which does not fit in the grade work.

For home reading, let the children be encouraged to select for themselves. "Short of courting obvious danger, the child should have a chance to select its literary pasturage, browse at will, explore and test, try and judge for itself," says Prof. Chubb. The class library may not be a very wide pasture, but let it be exceedingly green and inviting. On the other hand a word from the teacher, a chapter or a selection read to the class from a good book that is not popular will often succeed in creating a demand for it.

Use ingenuity and continued effort to persuade the non-reading boy or girl to use the library, but they should not be coerced in any way into taking books home, nor should the privilege be denied as a punishment for ordinary offenses.

Respect for the City's property must be taught and every reasonable measure taken to insure its observance. Insist on clean hands; show the children how to open a book and how to hold it. When it is necessary use covers; it is a pity, however, to hide the exterior of a beautiful book all the time.

REFERENCE AND TEACHERS' LIBRARY.

A certain percentage of the library apportionment each year will be set aside for teachers' books of reference, pedagogical aids, etc. These books should be collected in a central place under the charge of the principal's assistant, a teacher, or pupil selected for the purpose.

Shelve this collection by subject, following the arrangement given in Part II of this catalogue, which is based on the Decimal Classification. Wherever practicable a card catalogue should be prepared. Supplies for this purpose are on the general supply list, directions for cataloguing, books on classification and assistance in this work are to be had of the Bureau of Libraries upon application. For charging and recording circulation use the same kind of card provided for class libraries.

The books on children's reading included under Section 9, page 149, are recommended to the class teacher as helpful and suggestive, but there is no knowledge quite so useful as the first-hand knowledge acquired from reading the child's book itself.
